This weekend, China and ASEAN — which stands for the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the 10 member states of which border the South China Sea — will sign the “Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea.” China and the Philippines, the two largest claimants of the South China Sea, are joined by Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Taiwan, Vietnam and Malaysia, which collectively want to ensure that the South China Sea remains a watery, self-governing commons, not a strategic resource for the interests of any one country. In return for the promise of freedom of navigation in the South China Sea e79caf774b
