When I met with the co-chairman at the time, Dietrich Loven, last year, he told me that the “heavyweights are back”. That was meant as a reference to the two big European beer groups (AB InBev and Heineken) going on a buying spree by acquiring global beer giants Inbev and Løve. Well, those heavyweights are back and SAB Miller is one of them. The buyout, announced on April 26, comprises a €5.7bn cash-and-share bid for the remaining shares (which accounts for 19.5% of SAB Miller) of United Breweries, the world’s third largest beer company, which is in turn the target of a proposed takeover bid by Heineken in an auction that closed at €10.45 per share. Last week, the Fitch credit rating agency upgraded the long-term senior debt of UB, boosted by the promise of asset sales to help plug a €3.9bn budget deficit. With SAB offering €5.15 per UB share, Fitch assessed the SAB Miller price is significantly higher than its peers – 6% above their industry multiple. Given the tough market conditions and SAB Miller’s strong balance sheet, SAB will likely win this battle. Back in 2013, UB was badly beaten by a hostile German brewer (Grupo Modelo) in the takeover battle of Anheuser-Busch. Also, today’s market seems more vulnerable to takeover than it has been for the last decade. SALTIERE : Michael, it’s hard to miss the fact that SAB
