Scientists have discovered a new species of stickleback fish that is unique due to its surreal head shape. The species, named Thaumatichthys pacificus, comes from the North Pacific ocean and lives in currents of 2°C to 4°C. There are around 20 known species of stickleback around the world, all sharing the same general shape and appearance. The new species, however, came as a surprise as it has a different appearance in each of its four fins: its dorsal and pectoral fins are longer than the other pair. Also, it looks different when males and females have been compared. Dr Daniel Pauly, director of the Max Planck Institute for marine biology in Germany, and said: "Thaumatichthys pacificus is utterly bizarre and has no known relatives. "Its bizarre appearance and peculiar fin structure only became apparent when we examined images from our sophisticated sonar images. "Discoveries like this one will help scientists to better understand the evolutionary processes that allow taxa to inhabit different habitats and to become adapted to their unique conditions."
Q: Docker on MacOS Sierra using Docker Toolbox: "The volume is not local or non-local" I'm trying to install a docker container on MacOS Sierra using Docker Toolbox. I have docker and docker-machine installed from MacPorts, and the docker daemon is running. I run the following command: $ docker run -p 8000:8000 -d --name web ruby:1.9.3-p448 And the Docker service prints the following message: The volume "var/lib/docker/volumes/docker-sambart" is not local or non-local I
