Posts Tagged 'Obama releases immigration reform' We have come to a turning point in immigration reform. A compromise has been struck in the Senate to create a path to citizenship for the 11 million undocumented immigrants already here. Some liberals are declaring victory, but the battle for comprehensive immigration reform is far from over. President Obama today released a set of recommendations to Congress for fixing the nation's immigration laws. The president is calling for: Eliminating the country-of-birth rule for green cards. By revising the law, the president says he is "ending the outdated system that forces our families to choose between losing their homes, their jobs, and their right to live legally in this country." Immigrants who come from countries with low income, but not below the poverty line, would be allowed to work in the U.S. for two years before applying for permanent residency, and would have to pay taxes.

No more family chain migration. "It is not compassionate to push families into a distant, hard-to-reach country, with the hope they can start a new life there, only to turn them around and put them on a path to citizenship," the president said. Ending the backlog for visas. Approximately 700,000 visas that have been issued remain unclaimed. The president is calling for a guest worker program to help employers meet high-skilled labor demands. The president has also proposed the creation of a new, temporary visa for highly skilled foreign workers. This bill would allow undocumented immigrants to apply for visas so they could work

Grand Canyon Volcanic Field National Monument Grand Canyon Volcanic Field National Monument is a National Monument located in Coconino County, Arizona, about north of Flagstaff. It was dedicated on July 16, 1960. The park is located on the Coconino Plateau and is east of the Grand Canyon. In 1881 the region was the location of Arizona's first maar eruption of basalt. The area has since been considered an area of one of the largest centers of Neogene volcanism in the world. The Maar Valley is a calder
