A: If the R code is easy to copy into your notebooks, then it's already written in the book. You can (try to) copy it in, to see if it will work. If not, you can put some of the lines in #init.rda yourself. Have a look at the package pages on CRAN. If the code has other problems, it is almost certainly not in the book. In that case, you can still copy it and look at it, but you will need to rewrite it first. The package pages on CRAN should give you some instructions on what to do if you see syntax problems. If the syntax is unclear, you can search on the Internet for similar problems. Finally, do you have a copy of the book? If so, the book will have a section with a table of contents, which will tell you what you have to do if you find syntax errors. A: Reviewing the R packages and pre-release versions Make sure your installed packages and packages available for download. Have a look at the package pages on CRAN if you see issues. If you see issues use this: R> devtools::list_packages(status = "ideal") This shows the packages you have installed. If you do see issues, do not panic. You might have a package available for download that is not available for installation. Do not panic, close the book, read the R manual and go make a new question for this. A man who was referred to as "John" by a second-grade teacher two years ago, instead of his real name, has won a big legal battle over the name change. The unnamed man was eight years old when his school called the cops because he had been misidentified, and was handcuffed for 9 hours by a police officer. The incident took place at the Eugenia Christian Academy in Philadelphia, a private Christian school at the time. The man's real name was Joseph Jackson. Joseph Jackson - real name - when he was 8 years old. (Credit: CBS Philly) The school brought the John to the attention of Child Protective Services (CPS) when it was revealed that one of the school administrators was working for CPS, a CPS spokesperson said in a statement to CBS Philadelphia. CPS then decided to investigate the school and that's when the problem was discovered: The school only 6d1f23a050
